TO REJECT COMPROMISE

"No Negotiations Possible With Traitors" Declares Commander of Garrison at Capitol—Crisis is Acute.Evacuating Petrograd.
Washington, Sept. 12.—Shortage of food stuffs in Petrograd may make more difficult the defense of the Russian capital by the Kerensky government against the troops led by General Korniloff. Dispatches from the state department from Ambassador Pyman said that an evolution of Petrograd by a part of the civilian population is under way because of scarcity of supplies. The dispatches were sent three days ago.

Anxiety among officials and diplomats here today over the Russian situation was based largely on indications in unconfirmed dispatches that both Premier Kerensky's provisional government and also the forces behind General Korniloff were gathering strength. Such a situation they fear if long continued would cause the general alarm most dreaded by Russian officials.

Vice-Premier Optimistic.
Petrograd, Sept. 12.—Vice Premier Pyman said in an interview distributed by the Russian official news agency that the political situation could be considered perfectly favorable. All commanders are at the front with the exception of General Jenkin, who has been arrested with his chief of staff by the military commander, remain faithful to the provisional government.

Petrograd, Sept. 12.—The Associated Press was informed unofficially this morning at the winter palace that Premier Kerensky was about to assume the position of commander in chief of all Russian armies, at least until the revolt had been crushed.

While unable yet to report the final overthrow of General Korniloff, members of the Russian provisional government in conversation with the Associated Press this evening summed up the situation optimistically.

The new commander in chief of the Russian army, Major General Bonch-Bruyevitch, who formerly was attached to the staff of General Brusilov, one time commander in chief of the first, was first devoted to the provisional government.

An unconfirmed report was received at the capital to the effect that part of General Korniloff's army is sure.

Guard Kerensky's Office.

The interior of the winter palace was a remarkable sight, owing to extraordinary precautions which first were taken early yesterday when hope of compromise was lost finally. Outside M. Kerensky's office were stationed 200 sailors of the second Battalion of the corps. During the afternoon the students of the school of marines were brought into the palace. The city so far has been quiet.

All through the night M. Kerensky received delegations from army and navy units promising to support him. The council of workmen and soldiers' delegates sent telegrams to the telegraph operators' union declaring that the operators by refusing to work for Korniloff could help crush the revolt. Premier Kerensky issued an order to the Petrograd city garrison to denounce General Korniloff for opening the front for the Germans and for sending a division of Asiates against the capital while professing to defend liberty.

No Compromise Possible.

General Kozmin, now commanding the Petrograd city garrison, declared before the meeting in the winter palace of the representatives of the different organizations.

"No negotiations are possible with traitors. Our only future conversation will be carried on through conciliation."

"Only bayonets can now decide the conflict," was the declaration of Vice Premier Nekrasoff.

M. Tchernot, minister of agriculture, has resigned from the cabinet.

Ninety arrests were made in Petrograd last night. Premier Kerensky has ordered the procurer of the Petrograd court to put General Korniloff on trial under the historic 16th statute for "conspiring to overthrow the existing order." During the night Premier Kerensky had a conference with the procurer and dictated a lengthy description of "details of the conspiracy."

Korniloff's Proclamations.

General Korniloff's proclamations are published here today. The first dated at Moyley declares Korniloff did not send Lvov to Kerensky, but Kerensky first sent Lvov to him with the aim to create trouble.

General Korniloff in a proclamation declares he requires nothing personally except the salvation of Mighty Russia, and swears to lead the nation by the hand of victory over the foe to a constituent assembly through which the nation will decide its own fate, and choose the organization of its own political life.

"But I shall never betray Russia into the hands of its traditional foe, the German race, or make the Russian people the slaves of Germany. I prefer to die on the field of battle, rather than to witness the shame and infamy of Russian land."

"Russian people, in your hands rests the fate of your country," concludes the proclamation.

WHO IS KORNILOFF?

General Korniloff, leader of the army of rebellion against Kerensky's government in Russia, is essentially a self-made man. He was born in 1861 in a little village in western Siberia of humble parents. When he was old enough to walk he was put to work in the fields, but by his indomitable energy was able to educate himself by studying at night. At thirteen he entered the artillery college at Petrograd, and six years later was admitted to the artillery college at Petrograd.

The knowledge of mathematics and languages necessary to enter the artillery college, was learned by him by the hardest kind of study at night.

When twenty-two years of age Korniloff received his commission. The young artillery officer might have chosen a life of ease in the military depot at Petrograd, but instead he craved hard work and adventure and asked to be sent to Turkistan.

Korniloff served with distinction in the Russo-Japanese war, winning the rank of general. Early in the war with Germany he was wounded and captured by the Austrians, but later escaped.

In the second proclamation General Korniloff declares, is supported by all of the other commanders on the front, denounces the government for its timidity, weakness and indecision and declares that in order to well its unfitness, the government is creating the chimera of a non-existing counter revolution. The provisional government has prohibited the circulation of Korniloff's manifesto or publication of unofficial news concerning military measures taken against the the.

State of War at Moscow.

The provisional government today declares that a state of war exists in the town and district of Moscow.

Members of the Kerensky forces have informed the Associated Press personally that while they were unable to report the final overthrow of Korniloff, they are optimistic concerning the situation. Unconfirmed reports say that part of General Korniloff's party are surrendering to the government.

Petrograd is said to have sufficient provisions to last four or five days.

All elements in the population of Moscow, according to reports, emphasize their assurances of support to the government, which have already been given by the municipal council.

Captured 8,900 Russians.

Berlin, Sept. 12.—Russian prisoners captured by the Germans in battle of Riga, numbered 8,900, according to the official announcement issued today by the German general staff. The Germans also took 325 cannon.

Korniloff Wins First Clash.

(By International News Service.) Copenhagen, Sept. 12.—General Korniloff's rebellious army has been victorious in their first battle with Russian troops loyal to Kerensky and is continuing its march on Petrograd, according to advices received here today.

The scene of the action is believed to have been north of Luga, although it may have been in the Wiltsa sector on the Petrograd-Rabynia railway.

The dispatches did not give the location, but stated that Korniloff forces were able to overcome the resistance of the local Kerensky troops through the superiority of artillery.

The latest word from Russia indicates that the Cossacks under Korniloff are approaching the capital from three directions: The southwest, the south and the southeast. It is understood that Korniloff is not leading his rebellious troops in person, but is directing their movements from his headquarters.

The republican soldiers, under General Klenovskiy, are being reinforced and assurances are given in Petrograd that the advance of the Cossacks will soon be stopped and the military reserve put down.

Loyal Troops Active.

A curious feature of the Russian situation is that, despite the disaffection in parts of the army, loyal units are attacking the Austro-German armies at many points on the front and have gained important ground on the Bukowina front.

East of Riga troops lying in the rear of Korniloff's rebellious army are undertaking a counter offensive against the German advance guard.

FUTURE OF BELGIUM
TO FEATURE REPLY
OF KAISER TO POPE

(By International News Service.) Amsterdam, Sept. 12.—The future of Belgium is the main feature that is contained in Germany's reply to the pope's note.

This was made plain in advices from Berlin today.

The pan-Germans are clamoring for the annexation of the greater part if not all of Belgium, "says the report, "and taken in connection with the unrest among the civilian population growing out of commercial and industrial conditions, stimulated in some places doubtless by pro-German propagandists, places our country in a situation of extreme peril in a time when all should be used in a common cause." The psychological effect of calling in question the principles upon which it seems to the committee have been sustained by the court, is bad, and the tendency of it all is to impair the military efficiency of the men who are already in the service and of those who may be called to serve in this time of need."

Washington, Sept. 12.—The Weser Report, says the German reply will contain all the details, but will accept in principle the Pope's program. The paper adds that the reply will not be submitted to the main committee of the Reichstag.

THREE NEAR DEATH

Harvey Myers, aged forty, is at Beloit hospital today with severe gashes in the head and possibly a fractured skull. The three men were coming toward Beloit from Rockford shortly before midnight, traveling at the speedometer, averaging about the fifty miles per hour mark when the car hit a bad place in the road. The auto tipped on the side and rolled over and over. Other autoists passing shortly afterward found two of the men unconscious and the other in a dazed condition. They were brought to Beloit hospital, where a physician's care. Myers was the only one badly injured. The machine was a total wreck.

Committee's Report
Denounces Resolution
On Selective Draft

(BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.) Washington, Sept. 12.—Denouncing the introduction of such a proposition, the senate military committee today reported adversely Senator Hardwick's resolution, which would provide that consent of every drafted man must be obtained before he is required to perform foreign service. The committee, the report says, believes the draft law is unconstitutional, and every man drafted into the national army can be used abroad.

The situation arising out of this spirit of opposition to the selective draft act is serious," says the report, "and taken in connection with the unrest among the civilian population growing out of commercial and industrial conditions, stimulated in some places doubtless by pro-German propagandists, places our country in a situation of extreme peril in a time when all should be used in a common cause." LANSING HAS EVIDENCE

United States May Take Drastic Steps
if Nations Concerned Do Not Change Tactics.

(By International News Service.) Washington, Sept. 12.—Nearly every neutral nation throughout the world is a pawn in Germany's war game. Complete proof of fact today is in the hands of Secretary of State Lansing. Whether it will be made public depends on circumstances.

If the exposures in connection with the Argentine-Swedish muddle are sufficient warning and these neutrals change their methods, all will be well. If not, the United States will take drastic action in a number of cases, it was learned from administration leaders today.

Watch Neutral Diplomats.

The ramifications in the German plot girdle the world. More than one neutral did not fight here in America's cause. The capital is being closely watched, at least one case the state department "has the goods" on a very prominent diplomat. He has been outspoken in his criticism of the embargoes.

Despite the fact that in authorizing the embargo, information was made public proving that the diplomat's country has been a lavish contributor to Germany's necessities, this particular official is not the only prominent diplomat to have been openly critical of the government.

The peace propaganda, which the state department was compelled yesterday to officially warn the country against, was traced to his door.

This peace propaganda is not the legitimate movement which the country welcomes and which a contingent of the war.

The American destroyer was hit three times, the letter stated, but there were no casualties. The Americans rescued 21 officers and

COLLEGE ATHLETICS WILL BE CONTINUED

ATHLETIC SITUATION IN THE LARGE SCHOOLS IS IN AN UNCERTAIN STAGE DUE TO WAR CONDITIONS.

COACHES MAKE PLANS

Efforts Will be Made to Continue Athletics in Spite of Large Number of Enlisted Prominent Athletes.

Will athletics in the colleges and universities be up to the standard of past years or will the games be of a very inferior nature?" is a question which is being asked on all sides these days by followers of the college and university teams, as well as by the students. The question arises as a result of the fact that a large number of college athletes have enlisted in the military service of the country. Now the followers ask what the effect will be on the calibre and competition of the coming football, basketball and baseball contests.

The answer to the question is of an uncertain nature because of the different conditions which prevail at the many institutions. Some general facts can, however, be given as to the nature of the contests and the contestants. There is no doubt that the same schools will be seriously handicapped for men more as the result of the enlistments, but with this fact the darkened the athletic prospects of the school. Athletics should be and are conducted in most of the schools with the idea of giving the most benefit to the large class of people. A few men do leave an institution whether they are the best men in the school or not, that does not necessarily mean that the value and interest of the athletics is lost. Some schools, especially the smaller colleges, have the wrong idea with regard to athletics and the conduct of them. It is a well known fact that the smaller colleges bid for the services of certain men who are excellent athletes. Coaches have been known to spend the summer searching the country in the vicinity of the school looking for likely material from other schools and boys graduating from high schools. Financial inducements are offered for services on the gridiron or basketball court.

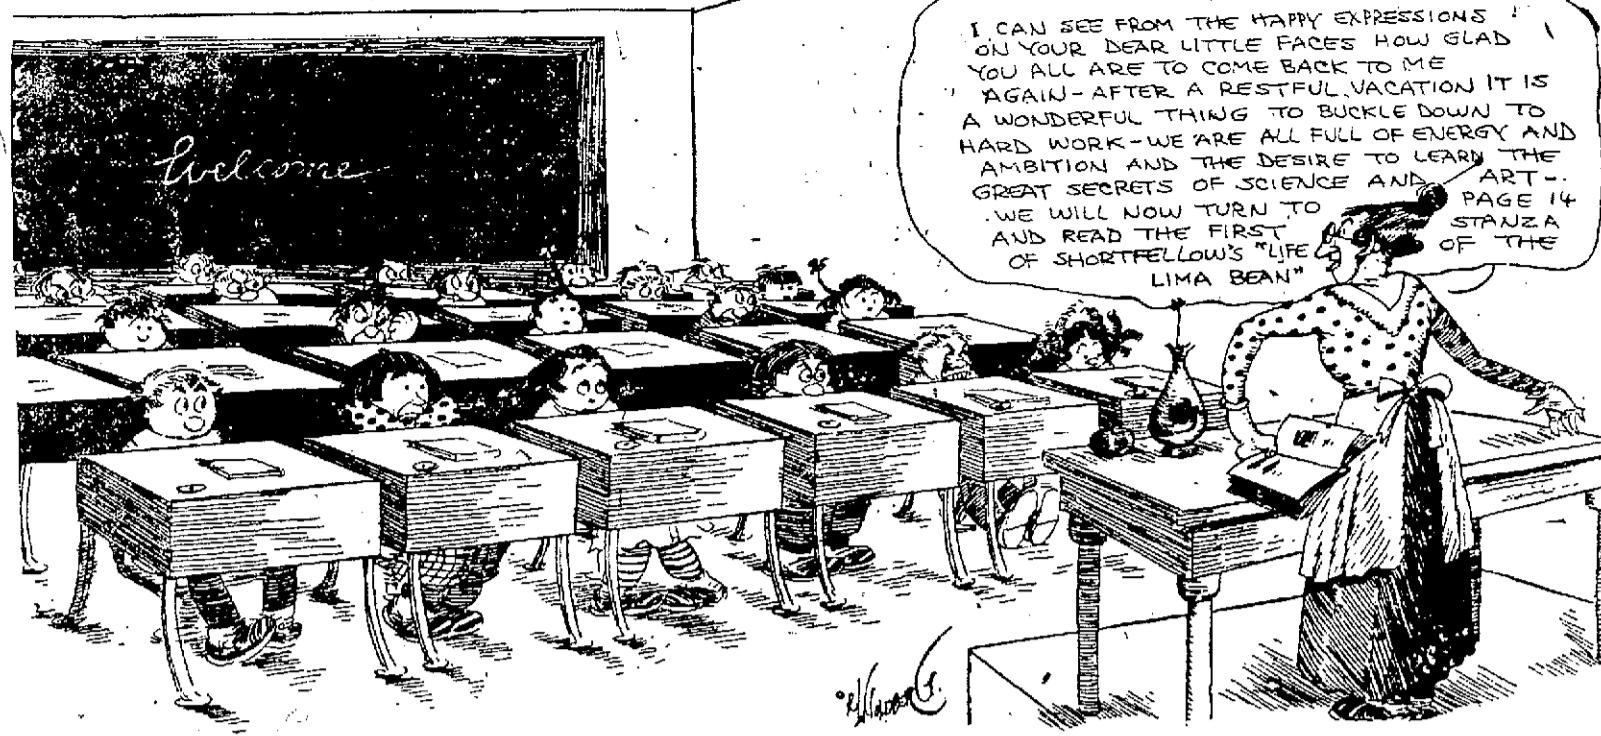

This class of athletics is not found in the larger colleges and universities and this is not the type of which the question is asked. After the war will have a great effect. What the followers of sports wish to know is whether the athletic world in general will be affected by the war. A careful survey of the large schools in the west and the conference schools in the west will show that the majority of the men have entered the service. Last spring the University of Wisconsin was forced to disband their baseball team due to the large number of enlisted men in the service before the war had been declared over two weeks. Other schools were confronted with similar circumstances and at that time the answer to the question would have been very different.

During the summer a decided change has come on the situation and it is a change for the benefit of the colleges and universities. The war department set the example and said that the United States schools would lose or athletics and that they would continue throughout the year. The department further pushed athletics when all high schools were urged to continue their athletic contests rather than introduce military drill. President Wilson has behind the movement to continue athletics because he realized that athletics should be part of the school life.

Now as to the calibre of the men and the spirit of fight which will prevail, it is a certain fact that the amount of pep will be present and in fact there is more cause to believe that the players will enter all contests with a keen desire to get more out of them than they did in the past. In other words they will be better fitted for service for their country.

All coaches will be confronted with Distributed enlistment of all college men.

Coaches throughout the country are looking at the situation in the light of "pushing athletics" and are starting the retrenching work at the present time. They are planning to be on the job early and will work late.

Some have gone so far as to set the date of practice and have issued their call for a quota of men to appear for practice. Some of the schools will open later this fall but in spite of this fact the schedules are even beginning at earlier dates than previously.

Some doubt the fact that large enough squads will be on hand to push the formation of a team. This question remains to be settled when the practice season opens but the coaches must have some idea of the size of their squads or they would be making such plans for the coming season. With these few facts in mind it is safe to venture the answer of the spectators by saying that the quality of the men in the contests will not be as good as that of former years but that the contests will be just as interesting if not more so than previous years. Furthermore, athletics will be pushed to a greater extent this year in all colleges, universities and even high schools than ever before.

As all schools will have the same conditions the contests of this fall and winter should be of a representative nature and not below the standard of former years. The players may not be of such a finished nature but the game itself will be as interesting and full of the old-time vim which always characterized the college contests.

In one or two cases it may be that some school will retain the majority of the members of former teams and thus will be ahead of its opponents.

This condition is very doubtful however due to the general and evenly

MINUS A FOOTBALL COACH AT BELOIT

High School in Session Three Days and No Coach for the Football Team Puts in an Appearance.

SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE
Beloit, Wis., Sept. 12.—War is biting the Beloit high school hard. With a football team that was good last year, and only loses two men this year, the chances for a team to represent the school are not of the brightest. It all comes about like this. Tom Charney, last year's coach and Beloit college athlete of no little note, left school last May to attend Fort Sheridan. Now he is Captain Charney, and is stationed at the draft armament in Michigan. "Prof." Myers, assistant coach, until a few weeks ago looked upon as Charney's successor, suddenly decided that he would like to "strike" a few hours himself. So he is at the present Fort Sheridan school for officers.

And with the appointment of teachers to fill the places left vacant on the high school staff, Principal McNeil either forgot or was unable to get an instructor that knew football as well as civics and history and mathematics and the other things that he would be expected to teach. At the same time, school has been going for three days, and no sign of a football coach has as yet shown up. McNeil admits that unless a coach can be secured in a hurry, no team will be formed.

But those who know are now getting very worried. Persistent rumors have it that Assistant Coach Adams, last year of the college, will be secured to the simple girdiron knowledge to the high school lads. Adams refuses to deny this. If he does accept, he will have good material to work with. With the exception of Scheble at full and McCarley at end, the team stands intact as it was last year, will be a good team, and should a good coach take it in charge, Beloit may well be classed in the running for the state title.

SPORTS LEADERSHIP MOVES TO THE WEST

SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE
New York, Sept. 12.—The unexpected fervor with which western athletes entered into the A. A. U. games at St. Louis recently, the splendor they showed, the able tennis played by westerners at Forrest Hills, and the fact that western colleges have led the way in keeping football in the curriculum of sports declare more strongly than anything else could that the west has turned from the east for its athletic guide and is going it alone.

A few years back sports activities practically centered in the east. The big football games, the big track meets, even the world's series was pulled off on the Atlantic seaboard.

There was a strong attempt early in the summer to discredit the obstacles under which St. Louis was laboring in order to stage the annual A. A. U. games and there was a concerted effort to remove the games from the Missouri metropolis back to the east. It failed when the St. Louis sports lovers went into the fight with both feet and held the gummie

The spirit was a commendable thing, but the fact that so many athletes—most of them westerners, by the way—attended was a most encouraging thing to the west.

There are so many persons living in the east that the west gets little help in big games in this section are able to draw from a vastly larger population, and consequently more profitably.

It now appears that Chicago will get the American league end of this year's world's series, adding another sports feature to a brilliant year for the west. The bigger kind of football is going to be almost centered in the west this year. When the war is over and sports begin again to take their regular turn with everything else, the west is going to have something more to say than has been granted in recent past years.

GRATIFYING RESULTS.

Most gratifying to the men who are behind the League of Nations must be the response that came to them from their appeal to citizens of the state over to endorse President Wilson and stand behind the government when such an action is needed. It showed plainly that the citizens of Wisconsin do not want any traitors in their midst. That a man is judged by his actions and that down in congress are many men whose terms of usefulness to this state and the nation could be terminated and they would not be missed. A man is either an American at this time or an enemy. He may have the longest lineage of Americanism behind him if he acts as an ally and friend to the foe we are at war with, he might just as well be deported to his friend's country and not be permitted to remain in an office he disgraces by his actions. The appeal of the League went forth in response to the plan of Senator La Follette, who sought to secure endorsement of his actions by obtaining signatures to a petition to be presented to congress that would misrepresent Wisconsin and the majority of Wisconsin people. That citizens have so generally rallied to the support of the League's contention should be a proof that Wisconsin is ready to give its men and its money and its moral support to the government. It has demonstrated the first two and stands ready now to show the whole world that we are not to be judged by our representatives down in Washington, who speak their own minds and not the thoughts of their unfortunate constituents whom they so basely have betrayed and misrepresented.

"SOMEWHERE?"

"Somewhere in France" American soldiers are waiting the bugle call to take their places in the fighting ranks. "Somewhere in the United States" other soldiers are training to go across the water to play their part in the great war drama. In almost every state of the union are armed camps of soldiers, drilling and preparing for this tragic war that has made more man look like a pigmy or a chessman, moved at will by the player seeking the king now.

Mountains have been whittled down, cities held in rutts, fertile fields converted into deserts, happy homes but a ruined memory, husbands and wives separated never to meet again in this world. Innocent children maimed and orphaned. Thousands upon thousands of human lives made but a sacrifice upon the altar of war gods at the dictation of one coterie of creatures who value a human life only for what it can accomplish. Beasts who sacrifice men and women into the seething furnaces of oblivion as they would waste material. Men who figure with uncanny precision that to gain the coveted advantage they can afford to sacrifice so many thousand human lives, and if they save any from the vortex they look around for some other place to utilize around for some other place to utilize these human pawns that they had expected to lose.

It is such a cruel and revengeful machine that our boys are training to combat in the name of humanity and from Africa to drift till Borneo. It is to reflect the world from the dross of this great immoral force that seeks to dominate the globe that we people of the United States are prepared to make a sacrifice of men and money to gain the right to live and think in a Christian, healthful manner and permit others to do likewise.

It is the call of the suffering that sends who have gone down to the depths of the ocean as a toll to this frightful orgy of crime and murder. It is the wail of the despoiled women and the murdered fathers and children that the United States has answered. The very soul of the countries despoiled and laid waste cries for aid and we are answering this call.

Somewhere in some future day peace will come to this world of ours. Some time the forces of right will conquer much; and we shall again feel assured that the inherent rights of man will not be violated, that treaty rights can never be scruples of paper, and that the ambition of one man or any coterie of men can not overturn a peaceful world without warning and remain unpunished. These men who are training will accomplish this act, and when they return to civil life they will be better and stronger men for the sacrifice they have made in behalf of humanity.

THE BOY WORKERS.

It has been an interesting sight to go out on the farms this summer and see the gangs of boys that have been working. While boys have always worked on the farms of their fathers and the neighbors, never before have such large gangs been organized in towns and cities to get out in the country, and help pull the farmer out of the hole created by scarcity of labor.

One boy who tried this experience tells of working with a gang of fifty Boy Scouts on a large market garden. The farmer was in despair at the way work was piling up ahead of him. Early fields could not be harvested because of lack of help, and the later crops were being spoilt with weeds.

Finally he applied to the Boy Scout organization of a nearby town and a special meeting was called. The farmer presented his case and urged the boys to take hold out of patriotism and help finish up his crops. Of twenty boys present, eighteen volunteered, and others came in later.

Of course the results accomplished were not proportionate to the number of the workers. One of the boys said it looked to him as if it took about two boys to do the work of a man. The boys were strong and agile and learned quickly. The great trouble was that they could not stop talking and fooling. While they were picking tomatoes every overripe specimen was seized as a very handy missile. Woe to the boy who had an unusual looking hat or who finished his stunt too quick. He soon received unique and brilliant decoration.

However the very first morning the boys got the weeds out of a two acre patch of celery, and stirred around the roots, making things look vastly different. So it went on all the week. It helped the farmer around a bad corner. In all large towns has this service of labor has not been utilized as yet. It needs close supervision, but it is capable of doing a lot.

The German people aren't a bit afraid of the United States, as they have it on the Kaiser's word that we are only going to send over three companies of infantry, a band of music, and a staff of newspaper reporters.

Of course those quotations that they print from the country newspapers are not any less funny when you set out to look up the paper in the directory and find there's no such publication.

Some of the business men who complain most bitterly about delay in freight traffic, will keep a railroad car on a side track for many days before having their own goods unloaded.

If there is any moral benefit in seeing yourself as others see you, Kaiser Bill must be greatly improved since reading President Wilson's note to Pope Benedict.

After smoking and giving away daily half a dozen ten cent cigars these men will proceed to kick about their wives' extravagant ten dollar full hat.

It is believed the censors will allow the German people to read the address and the signature of President Wilson's letter to the Pope.

The boys rejoice over the success of the crop of tomatoes as no better missile was ever invented to plug at each other.

A school teacher on $12 a week salary can usually get board for $10 if she agrees not to eat any meat, milk, butter, or eggs.

The children are looking forward with anticipation to the new school year and thinking of all the fun they'll have with the teacher.

Meat is awfully high-priced, but some of our generous marketmen allow the public to come in and smell.

THOUGHTS ON GOLD AND SILVER

If gold could make the blue skies bluer;
Could make a true friend, better
true;
If it could add unto the bliss
Of a devoted woman's kiss,
Or beautify her charming cheek,
I would let me where I am weak,
If it could give me grace of mind,
If it could be refined,
Until my form lies stark and cold,
I'd be a slave to yellow gold.

If silver made the sunshine brighter;
Could make life's real burdens lighter;
If ringing coins could stop the tears
When Death's grim messenger appears;
If silver, better than belief
In God's could soothe man's bitter grief.

To silver idiots I should pray
And worship them from day to day
And every hour that's mine to live
To money service I should give.
If having gold would sanctify me;
If everlasting joy 'twould but me;
If I could love my children more
By hoarding up a yellow store,
And could their innocence prolong.
Keep them in health and always strong.
And guard them from all forms of harm.
Or add to them one touch of charm
To gold I'd dedicate my might
And feel that I was doing right.

MICHAELIS APPOINTMENT
MERELY AN AFTERTHOUGHT

Copenhagen, Sept. 12.—The statement by the socialist newspaper Vorwärts of Berlin that the appointment of Dr. George Michaelis as imperial chancellor was due to a hasty decision by Emperor William, who originally had another candidate in view, has brought out a confession from the Vossische Zeitung as to the unexpected nature of the Michaelis appointment.

The Vossische Zeitung adds that socialist opposition was largely responsible for the emperor's dropping the candidate who had been regarded as having the greatest chances. It does not mention this candidate's name, but it is presumed that the Prince von Bulow, whom the socialists opposed because of his advocacy of annexation and the suspicion that he was opposed to parliamentarianism and internal reforms.

The socialists perhaps now realize, adds the Vossische Zeitung, that instead of furthering the cause of parliamentarianism they actually stigmatized the open door in its face.

KNOCK-KNEES' CONTRIBUTION.

(Great invention series.) One morning in the dawn of the world, Knock-Knees, the caveman, awoke with a peculiarly unpleasant feeling on the back of his neck. And lo, it was boil—the first boil!

"Sckrook!" screamed Knock-Knees, "I'm bowled!"

And he applied powder from bats' wings found in a purring ground on a two-holed Friday, and likewise the skin of a five-legged toad, but all to no avail.

By evening the boil was a full-grown boil, and big for its size, and Knock-Knees was frantic with pain and apprehension. But especially apprehension, for he had a date at half-past eight, with Starry-Eyes, the lascivious daughter of Old Egg-Top, and she had promised to give him the answer to his question. She must not see that he was bewitched!

His natural resourcefulness finally came to his aid. Tearing a broad, stiff leaf from a stickybush bush, he wrapped it around his neck and tied the ends together.

"Knick-knick!" cried Starry-Eyes, half an hour later, "I was all prepared to reject you, but that was because I didn't know you were a man of fashion. I love men of fashion, and that lovely original arrangement around your neck is simply irresistible!"

And thus stiff collars were given to an already suffering world.

Washington, Sept. 12.—The surprising news was forthcoming from Adjutant General H. P. McCain today that America has no national anthem, hymn or air by the provisions of any federal law.

Army and Navy regulations constitute the only authority for proclaiming the Star Spangled Banner as the national air. No federal court of law has ever taken the unusual step of allowing their transports to be used by the Red Cross. These will only be used for supplies most urgently need-

ED. KEMMERER HOME ROBBED LAST NIGHT WITH LOSS OF $600

Burglars Enter Home Through Back Window Early Last Night and Take Many Valuables.

Burglars entered the home of Edward Kemmerer, 28 Sinclair street, about eight o'clock last evening, and got away with jewelry and clothing to the value of about one hundred dollars. The men broke into the house, leaving open one of the back windows. Apparently they started working on the upstairs, for they ransacked the upper bedrooms, taking a diamond stickpin belonging to Mr. Kemmerer, valued at $300, and a watch belonging to Mrs. Kemmerer, valued at $50. Besides this, they took ten dollars in money, a number of small articles of jewelry, silk shirts, ties and other valuable clothing of both Mr. and Mrs. Kemmerer.

Mr. and Mrs. Kemmerer had left their home early in the evening and upon their return about half past nine, discovered the robbery. It is thought that the robbers or robbers were interrupted in their work by the arrival of Mr. and Mrs. Kemmerer or by neighbors. In the dining room a large amount of silver had been collected and piled on the sideboard, ready to be taken away. There was evidence that the men left in haste.

The police were notified by Mr. Kemmerer, and a search, not only of the city, but throughout the entire country side, has been started in cooperation with Sheriff Whipple.

The burglars, or possibly one man, left no evidence whatsoever as to their identity; the 14th had been gone about in a thorough manner, calculated to have gotten everything of value in the house, only the approach of some one alarmed the robber and the escape was made with the window mentioned above.

The Kemmerer home, a large frame structure in the exclusive residence district of the upper third ward, is placed close to homes both on Sinclair and on Court streets, but despite the fact that the robbery took place during the early evening when there were many people about, no one could give any information about suspicious looking men who may have been waiting around the neighborhood.

It is thought that the robbers or robbers had acquainted themselves with the Kemmerer house, and had quietly awaited the departure of both Mr. and Mrs. Kemmerer, they had as quietly gone around the back of the house, unobserved, they had ample opportunity to Jimmy open a window and gain access to the house.

Practically everything taken was from Mr. Kemmerer's bedroom, and most of it had been either in or on his bureau. The loss is fully covered by insurance.

WOMEN STAND READY TO SIGN FOR DUTY

REGISTRATION PLAN WILL GIVE THEM AN OPPORTUNITY TO STATE PREFERENCE FOR WAR WORK.

MANY LINES ARE OPEN

Scores of Occupations Now Calling for Women Workers—Single Women and Those With Spare Time Are Needed.

(By Mrs. Abbie Helms.) This is the question the women are asking when the matter is brought to their attention. The great majority of women can serve their country chiefly by attending to their duties in the homes. But there are tens of thousands who have special talents or training which will qualify them to share directly in the national task now engaging the nation.

A wide variety of opportunity awaits women. About one hundred and fifty different classes of employment are listed on the registration card, and one is apt to be bewildered by the multiplicity of questions asked. The thing is really very simple after all. If a woman is busy with her home duties, nothing else is asked of her. If she has spare time, opportunity is given that she may be utilized in some way. Perhaps in the doing of Red Cross work, making of children's garments for relief work, clerical work in the home town, caring for the sick, or doing charity work in one's own locality.

Women are already running the elevators in office buildings, serving as ushers in theatres, as conductors of street cars, and many other lines of similar work in larger cities. They are going into office work and many other kinds of light occupations, that able-bodied men may be released for active service.

Prof. Hull of the continuation school is very anxious to start a class of young women who will take up telegraphy as a serious business. There is a great demand for women in this line of work, and bright young girls who wish to really do something worth while for their government, to help out in the war, are asked to see Mr. Hull. Paying positions would be given, when properly competent for work, at a moderate remuneration.

Health aid classes have been started to fit young women to be nurses in the training work that nurses with hospital training may be released for duty abroad. These classes include six months' intensive training at some one of the state hospitals. Expenses of board and lodgings and $10 a month is paid during this period of training, but the applicant is expected to do general nursing at a compensation of $10 per week for a period of two years. This course is arranged by the state council of defense, and information may be secured from Mrs. Bertha Hull or from a circular explaining the work left at the local rest room.

The housekeeper, home maker and mother has one kind of duty, the unattached woman or the woman of leisure has another. But everyone is expected to do what she can to help out in the war, and many other kinds of light occupations, that able-bodied men may be released for active service.

Manufactures of agricultural pursuits must be kept up, the railroads must carry goods, mercantile establishments must transact business and in working in any of these women are helping to win the war. There is beginning to be quite an extensive demand upon the state council of defense for procuring help in various lines of work. This registration of women will line up applicants and show where such labor may be secured.

News Notes from Movieland

BY DAISY DEAN

One of the most important announcements made this year is that a complete and superb cinema version of "Les Misérables" is under way. Work on this great photodrama has gone forward for some time at Fort Lee. William Farnum is appearing as Jean Valjean. Victor Hugo's immortal classic, Mr. Farnum is infusing into his portrayal of the famous Vaufre a fineness of characterization, a depth of artistry seldom achieved and worthy of this master figure of literature.

The threescore years which have passed since the publication of "Les Misérables" have brought it more and more into the critics and laymen's estimation. "Les Misérables" is, without question, the most splendid epic and dramatic piece of fiction ever created. That is the manner in which Swinburne, the famous poet, described it. It is in the epic of a soul transfigured and redeemed, purified through heroism, and glorified through suffering, the tragedy and the comedy of life at its darkest and its brightest, of humanity at its best and its worst.

TWO VERSIONS OF RUSS REVOLUTION

There is no such thing as a monopoly of ideas in the movie business; when one strikes it is apt to strike in two or several places simultaneously as in one. Some weeks ago Herbert Brenon announced that he was at work on a film version of the story of Rasputin, the monk who exerted a great influence in the court of the Romanoffs, and now another film corporation makes the disclosure that it has completed a film called "Rasputin, the Black Monk," and that it will be released shortly on its program. The picture, the announcement runs, has been in preparation for several months. Montague Love acted the title role. June Elvidge impersonated the wife of Rodin, the early leader of the revolutionists. Played by Rasputin, and Henry Hull appeared as Premier Kerensky.

In addition to making her own photoplays, Clara Kimball Young is going to produce a series of comedy films. She has contracted for the services of Ray and Gordon Dooley, and is to be the star of the series.

Women must transact business and in working in any of these women are helping to win the war. There is beginning to be quite an extensive demand upon the state council of defense for procuring help in various lines of work. This registration of women will line up applicants and show where such labor may be secured.

Among the singers, dancers and comedians who participate in the performances are Dennis Matey, George Mack, Harry Meyers, Helen Raymond, Florence Earle, Marion Wallfield, Lavinia Winn, Harry Linker, Jean De Briac, Elaine Ford, Ralph O'Brien and the original talk of Broadway. "Very Good, but Eddie" is the third of a new type of musical comedies which have made the Princess Theatre the most fashionable playhouse in New York, and it is the first of the Marbury-Comstock productions to be seen in this city. Apart from its wealth of smart comedy and its unique stage devices, the show boasts of a score by Jerome Kern which contains over a dozen of the most tuneful melodies heard in a long time—many of them already popular here.

John J. McGraw, manager of the Giants, has been fined $1,000 for publishing newspaper interviews which he had at least the opportunity to censor after they were in print. The board of directors of the National League, in passing out judgment, gives warning that such offence in the future will draw a minimum penalty of suspension for the season. There are those (though perhaps not of the sport writing fraternity) who sympathize with McGraw. He deserves no sympathy. McGraw, as a matter of fact, while one of the most capable and astute leaders in baseball, is indeed lucky to be in a position to draw his handsome salary from the New York Giants.

Evansville News

MILK PRODUCERS' ASSOCIATION
TO ERECT RECEIVING STATION

[EXCERPT TO THE GAZETTE]

Evansville, Sept. 12.—Early last month there was formed in Evansville a Milk Producers' association with Robert Spencer as president, Wren May, treasurer, and Lee Campbell, secretary. The following board of directors were elected: Dan Finnane, Elmer Ross, Warren Porter, Mark Elliot, Robert Fraser, Sr., H. A. Knopp, Fred Rodd, and Ed. Hyne. This association has considered several projects since its formation, but it is just within the past few days that decisive action has been taken, and once taken, has been taken upon quickly. The association has bought the land where the Frost Engine company was located, extending from Church street, just across the street from the Baker Manufacturing company, to within twenty feet of the Ford garage, and on this ground will be erected at once a milk receiving station. This building, 28x60 feet, will be built of concrete blocks, and when finished will be a credit to the association and the city of Evansville. Ground is being broken today and the foundation started, for it is the aim of the association to have the building completed, and ready for work, as quickly as possible. Milk will be received at this receiving station the same as at the milk condensaries, and association prices will be paid to the members in their milk. The membership of this association is now much over the hundred mark and is steadily growing. This is evidenced by their launching into a controlling business of their own.

Red Cross Clippings.
R. M. Richmond, president of our local Red Cross society, has recently appointed Dr. M. L. Ewing chairman of knitting department; Mrs. Katherine Cherrill, chairman of comfort bag; Miss Mae Phillips, librarian.

Orders have been received to discontinue the surgical dressing work, for the present at least, and to bend every effort toward sewing and knitting. Especially now, this week should be devoted to the use of the sewing machines, for next week they will have to be returned to the school building. Pajamas, night shirts and bath robes are being rushed so as to get as many made as possible. Let as many as can make a point to go to the city hall and work, remembering that numbers add interest. Your presence there is an inspiration for others to do likewise.

"Ah, no, dear lady," he insisted, "I am not talking wildly. I am Grailot, who for thirty years have written dramas on one subject and one subject only—men and women. It has been given to me to study many varying types of the human race, to watch the outcome of many strange situations. I have watched the prince draw you nearer and nearer to him. What there is or may be between you I do not know. It is not for me to know. But if not now, some day Eugene of Serey means you to be his, and he is not a person to be lightly resisted. Now from the skies there looms up this sudden obstacle."

"You do not realize," Louise protested, almost eagerly, "how slight is my acquaintance with Mr. Strangewey. I once spent the night and a few hours of the next morning at his house in Cumberland, and that is all I have ever seen of him. How can his presence here be of any serious import to Eugene?"

"As to that," Grailot replied, "I say nothing. If what I have suggested does not exist, then for the first time in my life I have made a mistake; but I do not think I have. You may not realize it, but there is before you one of those struggles that make or mar the life of women of every age. As for the men, I will only say this, and it is because of it that I have spoken at all—I am a lover of fair play, and the struggle is not even. The younger man may hold every card in the pack, but Eugene of Serey has learned how to win tricks without aces. I stayed behind to say this to you, Louise. You know the young man, and I do not. It is you who must warn him."

"Warn him?" Louise repeated, with upraised eyebrows. "Dear master, aren't we just a little—do you mind if I use that word so hateful to you—melodramatic? The age of duels is past, also the age of hired braves and assassins."

"Agreed," Grailot interrupted, "but the weapons of today are more dangerous. It is the souls of their enemies that men attack. If I were friend of that young man's, I would say to him: 'Beware, not of the enmity of Eugene of Serey, but of his friend ship!' And now, dear lady, I have finished. I lingered behind because the world holds no more sincere admirer of yourself and your genius than I. Don't ring. May I not let myself out?"

He looked steadfastly into her eyes. His plain, bearded face was heavy-browed, lined, tired a little with the coming of age.

"You are not going?" she asked him. "Dear Louise," he said, "I am going, because the time when I can help is not yet. Listen! More harm has been done in this world by advice than in any other way. I have no advice to give you. You have one sure and certain guide, and that is your own heart, your own instincts, your own sweet consciousness of what is best. I leave you to that. If trouble comes, I am always ready!"

CHAPTER X.

During the remainder of that afternoon and evening John was oppressed by a vague sense of the splendor of his surroundings and his companion's mysterious capacity for achieving impossibilities. Their visits to the tailors, the shirtmakers, the hosiers and the bootmakers almost resembled a royal progress. All difficulties were waved aside. That night he dined, clothed like other men from head to foot, in the lofty dining room of one of the most exclusive clubs in London. The prince proved an agreeable if somewhat reticent companion. He introduced John to many well-known people, always with that little note of personal interest in his few words of presentation which gave a certain significance to the ceremony.

From the club, where the question of John's proposed membership, the prince acting as his sponsor, was favorably discussed with several members of the committee, they drove to Covent Garden, and for the first time in his life John entered the famous opera house. The prince, preceded by an attendant, led the way to a box upon the second tier. A woman turned her head as they entered and stretched out her hand, which the prince raised to his lips.

"You see, I have taken you at your word, Eugene," she remarked.

"Give me double pleasure, dear lady," the prince declared. "Not only is it a joy to be your host, but you give me also the opportunity of presenting to you my friend, John Strangewey. Strangewey, this is my very distant relative and very dear friend, Lady Hilda Mulloch."

Lady Hilda smiled graciously at John. She was apparently of a little less than middle age, with dark bands of chestnut hair surmounted by a tiara. Her face was the face of a clever and still beautiful woman; her figure slender and dignified; her voice low and delightful.

"Are you paying your nightly homage to Calavera, Mr. Strangewey, or are you only an occasional visitor?" she asked.

"This is my first visit of any sort to Covent Garden," John told her.

She looked at him with as much surprise as good breeding permitted. John, who had not as yet sat down, seemed almost supernaturally tall in that small box, with its low ceiling. He was looking around the house with the enthusiasm of a boy. Lady Hilda glanced away from him toward the prince, and smiled; then she looked back at John. There was something like admiration in her face.

"Do you live abroad?" she asked. John shook his head.

"I live in Cumberland," he said. "Many others here seem to think that is the same thing. My brother and I have a farm there."

"But you live in London occasionally, surely?"

"I have not been in London," John told her, "since I passed through it on my way home from Oxford, eight years ago."

"I have never heard anything so extraordinary in my life!" the woman declared frankly. "Is it the prince who has induced you to break out of your seclusion?"

"Our young friend," the prince explained, "finds himself suddenly in altered circumstances. He has been left a large fortune, and has come to spend it. Incidentally, I hope, he has come to see something more of your sex than is possible among his mountain wilds. He has come, in short, to look a little sense into life."

Lady Hilda leaned back in her chair. "How romantic!"

"The prince amuses himself," John assured her. "I don't suppose I shall use that word so hateful to you—melodramatic? The age of duels is past, also the age of hired braves and assassins."

"Agreed," Grailot interrupted, "but the weapons of today are more dangerous. It is the souls of their enemies that men attack. If I were friend of that young man's, I would say to him: 'Beware, not of the enmity of Eugene of Serey, but of his friend ship!' And now, dear lady, I have finished. I lingered behind because the world holds no more sincere admirer of yourself and your genius than I. Don't ring. May I not let myself out?"

"At any rate," said Lady Hilda, "I am glad to think that I shall be able to watch you when you see Calavera in her dances for your first time."

The curtain rang up upon one of the most gorgeous and sensuous of the Russian ballets. John, who by their joint insistence was occupying the front chair in the box, leaned forward in his place, his eyes steadfastly fixed upon the stage. Both the prince and Lady Hilda, in the background, although they occasionally glanced at the performance, devoted most of their attention to watching him.

As the story progressed and the music grew in passion and voluptuousness, they distinctly saw his almost militant protest. They saw the knitting of his firm mouth and the slight contraction of his eyebrows. The prince and his friend exchanged glances. She drew her chair a little further back, and he followed her example.

"Where did you find anything so wonderful as this?" she murmured.

"Lost among the hills of Cumberland," the prince replied. "I have an estate up there—in fact, he and I are joint lords of the manor of the village in which he has lived."

"And you?" she whispered, glancing at John to be sure that she was not overheard. "Where do you come in? As educator of the young? I don't seem to see you in that role!"

A very rare and by no means pleasant smile twisted the corners of his lips for a moment.

"It is a long story."

"Can I be brought in?" she asked.

He nodded.

"It rests with you. It would suit my plans."

She toyed with her fan for a moment, looked restlessly at the stage and back again at John. Then she rose from her place and stood before the lookingglass. From the greater obscurity of the box she motioned to the prince.

John remained entirely heedless of their movements. His eyes were still riveted upon the stage, fascinated with the wonderful coloring, the realization of a new art.

"You and I," Lady Hilda whispered, "do not need to play about with the truth, Eugene. What are you doing this for?"

"The idlest whim," the prince assured her quietly. "Look at him. Think for a moment of his position—absolutely without experience, entirely ignorant about women, with a fortune one only dreams of, and probably the handsomest animal in London. What is going to become of him?"

"I think I understand a little," she confessed.

"F'you think you do," the prince assented. "He has views, this young man. It is my humor to see them dissipated. The modern Sir Galahad always irritated me a little."

She shrugged her shoulders.

"They'll never give him a chance, these women," she said. "Much better hand him over to me."

The prince smiled enigmatically, and Lady Hilda returned to her seat. John was still leaning forward with his eyes fixed upon Calavera, who was dancing alone now. The ballet was drawing toward the end. The music had reached its climax of wild and passionate sensuousness, dominated and inspired by the woman whose every movement and every glance seemed part of some occult, dimly understood language.

"When the curtain rang down, John, like many others, was confused. Nevertheless, after that first breathless pause, he stood up and joined in the tumultuous applause.

"Well?" the prince asked.

John shook his head.

"I don't know," he answered.

"Neither does anyone else," Lady

Hilda said. "Don't try to analyze your impressions for our benefit. Mr. Strangewey. I am exactly in your position, and I have been here a dozen times. Even to us hardened men and women of the world, this Russian music came as a surprise. There were parts of it you did not like, though, weren't there?"

"There were parts of it I hated," John agreed. "There were passages that seemed to aim at discord in every sense of the word."

She nodded sympathetically. They were on their way down the broad staircase.

"I wonder," she murmured, "whether I am going to be asked out to supper?"

"Alas, not tonight, dear lady," the prince regretted. "I am having a few friends at Serey House."

She shot a glance at him and shrugged her shoulders. She was evidently displeased.

"How much too bad!" she exclaimed.

"I am not at all sure that it is right of you to invite Mr. Strangewey to one of your orgies. A respectable little supper at the Carlton, and a cigarette in my library afterward, would have been a great deal better for both of you—certainly for Mr. Strangewey. I think I shall run away with him, as I ts!"

What were the names?" "William Perkins and Elizabeth Lovewell," said the woman, "and I'm Elizabeth."

"Are you indeed? I thought I remembered your face when you came in, but—

"Yes," continued the visitor, "I'm all right, an' I thought as how I ought to drop in an' let you know that William has escaped."

"How do you like my bathing suit, Algy?" she queried, shyly.

"For me it doesn't exist," returned Algy, an ardent Christian Scientist.

NEWVILLE

Newville, Sept. 11.—Mr. and Mrs. William Stricker returned from Rockford Monday evening.

Miss Stregle called at Frank Sherman's Tuesday after school.

Mr. Bates came here Thursday from his home in Poetown.

Quite a few from here attended the Harvest Festival at Milton Junction.

Lightning struck the transformer of the electric line in front of George Kothlow's Wednesday evening. Considerable damage was done to it, and a new one was put on the next day.

Mrs. Cox of Troy Center was a visitor at the Kothlow home during the past week.

Simply moisten the hair with water and rub it in, about a teaspoonful is all that is required. It makes an abundance of rich, creamy lather, cleanses thoroughly, and rinses out easily. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and is soft, fresh looking, bright, fluffy, wavy and easy to handle. Besides, it loosens and takes out every particle of dust, dirt and dandruff.

When you wash your hair, be careful what you use. Most soaps and prepared shampoos contain too much alkali, which is very injurious, as it dries the scalp and makes the hair brittle.

The best thing to use is just plain mineralized cocoanut oil, for this is pure and entirely greaseless. It's very cheap, and beats the most expensive soaps or anything else to pieces. You can get this at any drug store, and a few ounces will last the whole family for months.
